

hinge

ARCHITECTURE
INTERIOR DESIGN

Greek Curves
A Residence in Crete

Hot Chile
Two Houses by an Architect to Watch

Roadster
Jason & Caroline Remake a
Toy-Maker

You Work Too
WeWork Arrives in Shanghai

www.hinge.hk

HK$80
RMB80
US$11

WHAT

Something Wild, The Farm, a new eatery focussed on fresh farm-to-table ingredients.

WHERE

Tsim Tsa Tsui, Kowloon, Hong Kong, China

WHO

PLOT Architecture Office

HOW

With the theme of fresh food running through it, the space first constricts patrons upon entry, squishing them past the open kitchen and a bank of timber tables toward the larger area of the dining room. Windows beckon here, as does a central table occupying an implied courtyard under a 'skylight', and screened with bamboo. Along the windows, shelves of real herbs grow in labelled pots. Overhead, sliced bamboo forms a ceiling lattice.

WHY

Because the world now craves authenticity and real ingredients. Because in the age of 'fake news', real nourishment is more important than ever. Because in centre-city Hong Kong, finding anything remotely 'real' is a surprise. Because the idea of a 'wild farm' surrounded by concrete makes us happier already.

